About "minimum route frequencies"

ICB licences have minimum service levels for each route point. These are usually stated as daily or weekly minimums in each direction. Operators may adjust service levels without PT Board approval as long as they do not go below the minimums for the route. This system can give operators flexibility to adjust services as market needs change.

About "route points"

The stops along an ICB route are usually stated as municipalities (e.g. incorporated cities, towns, and/or villages), unincorporated towns and villages and First Nations' communities. Generally, terms and conditions of licence generally do not specify locations where a bus stops in a municipality.
